

Salvador Dali was a Spanish painter best known for the striking and the bizarre images in his surrealist work. His best known work, The Persistence of Memory, was completed in 1931. His artist repertoire also included film, sculpture and photography. He collaborated with Walt Disney and Alfred Hitchcock. Widely considered to be greatly imaginative, Dali had an affinity for doing unusual things to draw attention to himself. This sometimes irked those who loved his art as much as it annoyed his critics since his eccentric manner sometimes drew more public attention than his art work.
